While prlonging the intuition of pioneer African theologians, it seeks to offer broader scriptural and dogmatic bases to faith interpretation in Africa. The book, Jesus in Post-Missionary Africa- Questions and Issues in African Contextual Christology, proposed here by the Claretian theologian, Nicholas Mbogu takes its place in this refreshing shift of emphasis. The author states clearly that our proclamation of God in Africa will be seriously deficient without an adequate Christology.

Christology is immense, and I do not propose to review what others have done more adequately.⁶ My purpose is to imagine the African experience of Jesus in two ways: first, to reimagine the faith of Africa and, second, to explore how

THE AFRICAN EXPERIENCE OF JESUS

Diane B. Stinton's book, Jesus of Africa, reminds me of the Christological question above posed by J.V. Taylor. As Canadian and a woman, Diane has written a good insight on an African's Christology. By doing so, she validates that Christ is a universal savior who can be studied without being limited by national boundaries or gender.

claim that there is no difference between God and Jesus in the minds of African Christians; Cf. Kofi Appiah-Kubi's "Christology," in J. Parrat, (ed.); A Reader in African Christian Theology, London, SPCK, 1987, 70. A confusion of both bears serious implications for African Christology at this point in time. As Kwame Bediako rightly points Christology - Christology - The Arian controversy: The lingering disagreements about which Christological model was to be considered normative burst into the open in the early 4th century in what became known as the Arian controversy, possibly the most-intense and most-consequential theological dispute in early Christianity. The two protagonists, Arius (c. 250–336) and Athanasius (c. 293 ...

Christology - The Arian controversy | Britannica

Peter's confession that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the living God, is a turning point in the Gospel narratives (Matt. 16:16). Following the confession, we read, "From that time Jesus began to show his disciples that he must go to Jerusalem and suffer many things from the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and on the third day be raised" (Matt. 16:21).

The Basics of Chalcedonian Christology | Tabletalk

The race and appearance of Jesus has been a topic of discussion since the days of early Christianity. Various theories about the race of Jesus have been proposed and debated. By the Middle Ages, a number of documents, generally of unknown or questionable origin, had been composed and were circulating with details of the appearance of Jesus. Now these documents are mostly considered forgeries.
